Planning board okays Lair plat ; Metcalf, Lindsey score decision

Even though their advice was ignored Thursday night by Canyon Planning and Zoning Commissioners, City Manager Glen Metcalf and Randall County Commissioner Paul Lindsey indicated Friday they will continue to fight the development of Canyon North as currently planned.

Both officials stuck by their contentions, made during the Thursday evening meeting, that development of the subdivision as planned by A.W. Lair will stop growth to the north of Canyon and will prove burdensome for county government.

Planning and zoning commissioners ignored the warnings of Metcalf, Lindsey and City Engineer Bill McMorries and granted a handful of variances to Lair for development of his full-section subdivision which lies just outside the city but within its extra-territorial jurisdiction.

Lindsey said the planning board's action amounts to non-enforcement of the city's subdivision regulations.

He said he will recommend that Randall County commissioners not grant approval of a preliminary plat for the subdivision which is to be presented to them on March 22.

Metcalf said he will issue to Canyon city commissioners the same warning he gave planning board members Thursday night when the preliminary plat comes to the commission for approval on March 22.

"I definitely believe it will stop growth," Metcalf said of the subdivision as now planned for development.

He said he will present the plat to both county commissioners and city commissioners and will present to the city his feelings as well as a report from the county commissioners.

Metcalf has consistently been opposed to current development plans of Lair for the subdivision, and initially recommended to the planning board that the section be annexed into the city.

Lindsey likewise has been critical of the development, particularly the construction of a multi-mile stretch of road through the subdivision.

Metcalf agrees. "I think in the words of A.W. that it's a 'cheesy road,'" he said Friday.

Lindsey said Friday he feels the action of the planning board in granting the variances to Lair amounts to a total disregard for city responsibilities within its own extra-territorial jurisdiction.

The action, if approved by the city commission on March 22, he said, will place the entire burden for controlling extra-territorial subdivisions on the county, which is without legal power to control anything but construction of roads.

The county has no zoning ordinance-making powers, Lindsey noted, and can use only coercive power to force developers to construct roads to county road specifications.

Lindsey says the road Lair has built in Canyon North does not meet county specifications and he will recommend the road not be accepted for county maintenance.

Lair presented his preliminary plat for approval and Metcalf presented to the planning commission Thursday night a list of eight discrepancies in the plat which would require either action by the developer or the granting of variances by the planning and zoning commission.

The commission, after 3 hours of discussion, chose the latter.

The plat presented calls for 105 multi-acre lots on the section, with provisions for each lot to provide its own sewage disposal and water system.

A motion made by Commissioner Kenneth Olsen passed on a 5-0 vote. Only George Ritter abstained from the ballot on the issue.

Olsen's motion is that the commission recommend city commissioners approve the preliminary plat and that the

Discrimination complaint filed

A Canyon woman has filed a complaint against the Canyon Independent School District charging that administrators have discriminated against her in hiring practices because she is of Mexican-American extraction.

Mrs. Isabell Garcia filed the complaint by mail with the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission in Albuquerque, N.M. School officials deny they have discriminated against anyone.

But, at least one other Mexican-American woman in Canyon says she also feels she has been mistreated by the district. She has not filed any formal complaint.

Mrs. Garcia said Wednesday her complaint stems from efforts over the past year to be employed by the Canyon district in either a secretarial or teaching aide capacity.

She said she has not been told by school officials that her national origin or extraction was the reason she has not been hired, but believes from the general attitude of officials that she is being discriminated against.

Mrs. Garcia said she initially applied for a job as a secretary last spring when she heard of a job opening, was told that she had "a good chance for the job" and then was told the job was filled.

In the early fall, she said, she applied for a teacher aide position and was given reason to believe she might be hired, but was later told after calling repeatedly that the job had been given to someone else.

She said school officials seemed helpful and nice when initially approached for jobs, but failed to return her phone calls and were unavailable to talk to her when she later inquired about the job openings.

She termed the attitude of school officials as one concerned with giving her "the runaround."

"I feel I'm being discriminated against," she said. "I feel that because they have Virginia (Rendon, a teacher aide) as a teacher aide they don't feel they're discriminating because they have one Mexican-American and they don't need any more."

Schools Supt. Jerry Jacobs said Friday the school district does not discriminate in its hir-

8th grader wins bee

An eighth grader who overcame stagefright that had hampered him in earlier contests, spelled his way to the county championship Wednesday.

Cody Duncan, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. V.J. Duncan correctly spelled the words bedlam and befuddle to win the senior spelling bee and become county champion.

He will compete in the regional bee later this month.

Duncan out-spelled nine other junior high students, correcting the misspelling of runner-up Duane Dove.

The junior spelling bee winner, Randy Bigelow was fourth in the senior competition, after besting 17 other elementary grade spellers to win the junior title.

Bigelow, the fifth-grade son of Mr. and Mrs. Neal Bigelow, won in the eleventh round with the words apoplexy and apostrophe.

By the seventh round, only Bigelow and Don Read, 12, were left. They continued with flawless spelling until the tenth round when Read missed the word apoplexy. Read is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Read.

The junior bee was held first, with WTSU English instructor Jan Cosmic pronouncing the words. Judges were Mrs. Betty Hodges, Mrs. Audie McManigal and Mrs. Phil Swartzell.

All the spellers completed the first round, but by the sixth round, only five remained in the bee.

The word advocacy downed Jimma Johnson, fifth-grader from Gene Howe. Next, Tammy Green, Rex Reeves sixth-grader, stumbled on the word aggregate and Meg Reeves, sixth-grader at Rex Reeves, missed on the word alleviate.

A variety of words downed the other spellers in the earlier rounds. Kerry Demus put an incorrect 'e' in glorious and Catherine Evans couldn't gether 'c's and 's's untangled in icicle. Allison Pride missed on jackknife and Glen Storley missed an 'e' in nominee. Permissible was the downfall of Judy Zuzum and pliable downed Jana Hancock. Kevin Wait missed sponsor, Shelly Jobe missed squirrel, and Kim Hudson fell on abolition.

Holding their own until late rounds were Margaret White, Renee Judkins, Russell Schmidt and Jeff Knight.

The senior bee went only two rounds. Mike Martindale missed on architect and Roger Gower tripped over armadillo. Kevin Carroll was downed by arrogance. Toni Strickland missed asterisk and Barbara Sommer had trouble with atonement.

Mekala Fletcher ended the first round on audacity and Bigelow, the junior winner, couldn't handle auxiliary. Ella Bost cut the

WT chamber leader defends promo maps

The director of development for the West Texas Chamber of Commerce said Friday he'll make no apologies for a "Fun and Adventure" map distributed by the WTCC and which omits mention of West Texas State University and the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum.

Local officials received copies of the brochure, which WTCC officials say is a major tourism promotion effort, Thursday and noted the two major Canyon attractions had not been listed.

Ed Coltharp, WTCC development director, said Friday the regional chamber charges from $100 up for various sized mentions of attractions in the brochure.

Local officials hit the program as unfair.

Coltharp said the brochures, which feature a map of the West Texas area with attractions marked, are used on a mass basis to answer general inquiries about the area and in efforts to promote travel and tourism. The brochures, for example, are placed at the Texas Highway Department traveler aid centers at Texas borders for tourist information.

Roland Black, manager of the Canyon Chamber of Commerce, said the WTCC asked for $600 from the Canyon chamber to include a small advertisement about the city in the brochure. The chamber is a member of the WTCC and pays $100 per year membership dues, he said.

"We are members and do pay dues to the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, but the only time we hear from them is when they want money," Black said. "In eight years, someone from the WTCC has been in our office one time."

The "TEXAS" musical-drama, which plays in Palo Duro Canyon's Pioneer Amphitheatre during summer months, is mentioned in several lines of type in the brochure. Those lines, according to Mrs. Bonnie Whittington, secretary for the "TEXAS" office, cost the show's sponsor, the Texas Panhandle Heritage Foundation, $100. The musical is also given mention in a small advertisement paid for by the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce.

WTSU Development Director Keith Winter said the university paid $600 two years ago to take out an advertisement in the brochure "but we couldn't tell that we got any results."

"That's a lot of money," he said. "We just could flat use the $600 more effectively by going directly to the student."

Winter said the university is also a paying member of the West Texas chamber.

Dr. James Hanson, director of the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum, said he feels the WTCC approach "is not too fair," but he said "I understand they've got to pay for it" (See MAPS, Page 5)

City still awaits fed word on growth center designation

Local officials won't know until Monday whether Canyon has been designated a growth center in connection with a Friday announcement that the Texas Panhandle has been designated an Economic Development District and is now eligible for millions of dollars in federal grant funds.

If the city is named a growth center along with Amarillo, both cities would be eligible for funding levels through federal programs not available to other Panhandle towns.

Lee McMurtry, aide to Congressman Jack Hightower, said late Friday the Economic Development Administration in Washington will not make public the growth center designations until Monday. The EDA announced the overall Panhandle designation as an economic development area late Friday.

"I feel very confident Canyon will be named a growth center," George Louder, executive director of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission, said Friday. The PRPC is the administrative agency through which EDA grants will be handled in the region. The PRPC requested the overall designation and recommended Canyon-Amarillo be a growth center.

Growth center designation for Canyon would, according to Louder, open a number of federal programs for possible use by the city in actual hardware type items.

Such things as industrial parks with water and sewer lines and streets could be financed under federal EDA grants which provide that the feds pay 60 percent of the cost while local government picks up 40 percent, according to Louder.

"We are very pleased to get this designation," Louder said. "Now we have federal programs available to the communities which can put some hardware on the ground."

PRPC officials have been compiling information and working with Washington officials for more than 2½ years to receive the EDA designation.

Lower-paid staff due raises

No general pay hike seen for university faculty members

Faculty members can expect to receive no across-the-board pay raises next fall from West Texas State University, Academic Vice President Ray Malzahn said last week.

Malzahn, currently in the throes of budget preparation for the 1976-77 school year, said he anticipates that no faculty lay-offs due to financial exigency will be required by the budget.

The Texas legislature last year mandated a 6.8 percent pay hike for all university staff employees who made $10,500 per year or under as of Sept. 1, 1975. Those, Malzahn said, will probably be the only across-the-board raises given in the fiscal year budget.

Budget proposals have not yet gone to President Lloyd I. Watkins for review and none have yet been approved.

"If there are no mandated across-the-board increases for faculty, the choice to go to merit raises is one to be made by the university," Malzahn said. "And, it seems to me that merit raises are the just way to manage the budget."

In addition to merit raises for faculty members, Malzahn said faculty members who are promoted can anticipate pay hikes.

Currently, a university-wide tenure and promotion committee is considering those faculty members who should be recommended for promotion in rank. But, Malzahn said, the committee has no say-so about and does not consider pay hikes connected with promotions.

Raises which accompany promotions, he said, are recommended by the Council of Academic Deans and his office to the president.

Merit raises are recommended, he said through the department heads, individual deans, the council of deans and his office.

Terminations of faculty members, Malzahn said, will probably not be tied to budgetary restraints. In years of decreasing enrollments after 1969, more than a dozen faculty members were terminated by the university due to financial exigencies.

"Tentatively," he said, "there will be no terminations because of financial exigencies."

Non-faculty employees of the university who make under $10,500 per year as of Sept. 1, 1975, can expect a mandated 6.8 percent increase to those non-faculty employees who make above $10,500. They received a 14.3 percent hike in September although the raise was not mandated by the legislature.

WTSU Business Manager Clarence E. Thompson said officials are still discussing the possibility of granting a similar 6.8 percent increase to those non-faculty employees who make above $10,500. They received a 14.3 percent hike in September although the raise was not mandated by the legislature.

Raises were not mandated last fall for faculty members.

University officials, in planning for the 1976-77 budget, are working with fewer appropriated dollars for that year of the biennium than was allocated by the legislature for the current year.

Legislators allocated $11.25 million for the university's operation in 1975-76 and $10.6 million for 1976-77.

However, legislators appropriated about $300,000 more for faculty salaries in 1976-77 than was allocated for 1975-76. Faculty salaries appropriation for the current year is $4.85 million and is $5.18 million for 1976-77.

PRPC foes claim discrimination

Plaintiffs in a civil suit directed at state, regional and local governments and officials are taking a new approach in their challenge of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission.

They filed a first amended original petition last week in 47th Dist. Court in response to instructions from Dist. Judge Bryan Poff given several weeks ago during a preliminary hearing on the suit.

The 15 plaintiffs, who are seeking to restrain local government participation in the PRPC, have named Canyon city and Randall County commissioners as defendants as well as Gov. Dolph Briscoe, the State of Texas and several other area cities and counties.

The new petition filed last week challenges the constitutionality of a Texas law which allowed formation and operation of regional planning commissions and asks that the law be declared unconstitutional by the judge.

The law, plaintiffs allege, is in direct contradiction with part of the state Constitution which grants to the Legislature the authority to provide by special statute for the consolidation of governmental offices and functions of government of any one or more political subdivisions in one county, but that before such a law can be passed an election must be held within the political subdivision.

"Plaintiffs say that the governmental functions and consolidations of functions accomplished by the (PRPC) have not been accomplished with the approval of such districts affected . . . and that therefore such participation . . . without a duly qualified election makes participation and membership an illegal act . . . the plaintiffs contend, "and no procedures for such election being required by the (statute which established regional planning commissions), the activities and legislative grants (to and of the PRPC) are unconstitutional, and the expenditures of money by the individual representative

On land control, non-control

Local school board defensive

Randall County commissioners, who last week passed a resolution opposing federal land use regulations in any form, have not been particularly consistent in their various stands and discussions on the control of land use outside incorporated city limits.

They said Monday, for example, they oppose any legislation from Congress on land use regulation, preferring instead to have such control at the local level, when, in fact, the only legislation now pending in Congress would require that land use be regulated at the local level.

That's an over simplification, of course, but according to Dr. Robert Sawvell, head of the geography department at West Texas State University, the net effect of the bill now pending at the federal level will be to force counties and states throughout the country to assume the responsibilities for land use control.

It's a responsibility which cities already have, a responsibility for planning and zoning and controlling growth so it can be accomplished in an orderly manner to the betterment of the citizenry in general.

Counties, and Randall County is no exception, have traditionally shied away from land use control, apparently failing to realize that rather than being a complicated and covert plot to overthrow all that is good in American free enterprise, such control is a well-tested and proven-effective way of providing for a greater good of a community.

Randall County commissioners, for example, have declined, even when presented hard evidence, to take control of the indiscriminate drilling of bore-hole type septic tanks in the county area. The deleterious effects of such sewage disposal on the county's water table continue.

Commissioners came but an inch from passing a resolution last fall condemning the proposed new Texas Constitution and declined to give their support to a document which, in its section on local government, would have given the county the power to assume land use control authority.

On the other hand, commissioners, while virtually powerless to control land uses outside the city limits, have taken steps to stall the financial impoverishment of county citizens due to ill-constructed subdivision streets.

County commissioners, it is obvious, are ambivalent on the question of how much authority they should have for land use regulation.

On the one hand, they can see that Randall County is heading for a financial quagmire due to the lack of planning and zoning in rural areas.

On the other, they are locally elected, they want to be re-elected, they understand the basically defensive and reactive nature of rural property owners, and they don't want to have to regulate their friends and neighbors.

But, the simple fact remains that without some regulation of land use in this county, county taxpayers, both collectively and individually, are bound to suffer in the long run.

If county commissioners are largely unable to have any effective control over land use and related factors, including planning, because of state, legal prohibitions, and if the state voters refuse to give the state the authority to change those prohibitions, then local control over land use as advocated by Randall County commissioners is obviously a pipe dream at this stage.

If the importance of good land control is recognized, then from what corner should the impetus for land use control come?

The logical answer, unfortunately, is from the federal level. Unfortunately, because the land use control controversy demonstrates for the umpteenth time, not the usurpation of local prerogatives by the federal government, but the willing abdication of responsibility for land use control by local government itself, if abdication means not only a giving up of prerogatives but also the deliberate refusal to take initiative in obtaining the prerogatives.

It's an old saw, but truer every day that that which local governments won't do, the feds will sooner or later get around to.

If the Randall County commissioners are truly concerned about the regulation of land use, it might be more consistent to welcome any action whether from the federal or state level which would bestow on county government the mantle of authority for such control than to reject the authority simply because it is mandated by the federal government. — C.W.

BY CARROLL WILSON

It's probably only natural that Canyon School Board members, smarting from two bond issue defeats, are a bit on the defensive these days.

But, they should beware lest they allow their defensiveness to become a shield, padding them from reality and separating them from their basic and ultimate responsibility and accountability to the voters.

That this is the direction their defensiveness is taking is manifested in the way the board has been handling its public business.

Defensiveness threatens to become recalcitrance and borders on flat bull-headedness.

A board-versus-the-people attitude threatens to take hold of the board members to the utter detriment of their effectiveness.

The characteristics of the seemingly pervasive attitude are these, as manifested in last week's board meeting, include a failure to hit head-on the Feb. 17 bond issue defeat and surrounding issues.

The board did not schedule discussion of the bond issue for the meeting and avoided direct questions on their beliefs about the defeat strenuously.

Open discussion of the bond issue and where the Canyon schools should go from here is not only to be logically expected from elected officials, but is absolutely necessary if the board is to regain credibility to any considerable extent.

The board, unfortunately, has in recent months held almost no open discussion on any issue.

Board members without comment go down their agenda list, making motions, seconding motions and saying "aye."

In place of discussion by the board, discussion which gives the taxpayer some insight into board reasoning, Supt. Jerry Jacobs has taken to soliloquizing at length on whatever subject may be at hand. He gets up, makes his presentation to the public, not the board, and sits down to await only a formal action and the next agenda item.

To the complaint that the board has not given out the facts to the taxpayer while asking for a positive vote for millions in bond money, the board has responded that the facts have been given.

To a large extent, that's true.

But, that a good number of voters feel they have not been given the facts is illustrative of a condition induced by the board through lack of discussion about those facts. The presentation of what appears to be a fait accompli with no concomitant discussion leaves a vacuum in the public mind which the facts alone do not fill.

The feeling is, frankly, that the board has no desire to participate in open discussion, particularly on controversial issues which might generate opposition even on the board itself.

Witness the treatment given Ed Wieck, when he proposed for board consideration a plan for construction of a new elementary school only at the present time. Board members ignored the plan and have yet to discuss it in public. Wieck apparently learned his lesson. He's hardly said a word at school board meetings since.

This feeling is the direct result of what some letter-writers have referred to as the Hail Caesar approach to audience participation in board meetings prior to the Feb. 17 bond issue.

Gene Howe area folks were downright intimidating. They were rude.

They were joined in their rudeness by the school board members themselves, who, rather than realizing their public trust involves hearing opposing views, have given flippant responses to questions and made demeaning comments to opponents.

The rudeness cropped up again last week when board members refused to respond to a legitimate question from a member of the audience.

This manifestation of defensiveness can only work to the discredit of the board.

The measure of public distrust is illustrated by comments from some who attended the board meeting Tuesday night and noted, with some alarm, that the Canyon district architect is continuing to design plans for a new elementary school.

One person attending the session noted that the architect has presented two new plans for an elementary school — one which embraces tooth and toenail the open-classroom concept but which has only 41,000 square feet and would probably cost less to build, the other which includes closed classrooms of the more traditional approach, but which has 46,000 square feet and can certainly be expected to cost more.

If the Canyon board is presented these two plans as ultimate alternatives and they feel that expense of construction is a key in passing a bond issue, they are likely to pick the less popular open concept classroom building because it is likely to be less expensive while the more traditional approach, while more expensive, might be preferable to the voters.

The school staff prefers the open classroom. The school board probably prefers less expense.

The public, at least from evidence so far, prefers the closed concept and less expense.

The situation, then, notes the spectator, amounts to a heads-you-win, tails-I-lose proposition for the voter.

His assessment of the situation may or may not be appropriate. But, it is certainly an indication of the kind of distrust the board must overcome if it is to be successful in its position of public trust.

That distrust cannot be overcome so long as the board avoids a direct and head-on approach to its credibility problems.

Our world

Formula for happiness

By ANN BROWN

People who sing in church choirs frequently lament the sad, troubled faces they observe on the majority of the congregation.

Choir members insist that when they see those same people at a football game they are all smiles. Why?

There may, of course, be as many reasons as there are unhappy people. However, three basic reasons probably cover the majority of them.

Faithful Christians will go to church regardless how depressed they are, but they probably have no desire to attend a football game when they are unhappy.

Then there are people who seldom think about God or the church as long as everything goes well. When adversity comes, they remember God has promised help in time of trouble.

God says if we won't do what He wants us to do, then He won't do what we want Him to do (Zech. 7:13). He also teaches us by precept and example to go to church (Heb. 10:24-25; Luke 4:16).

It follows then that it would be useless to ask God for help while we ignore His church.

The third group probably fit into the category of mischievous children who enjoy themselves tremendously doing something they know is wrong — until a teacher, parent, or some other responsible adult shows up.

Many people do not seem to be aware they are in God's presence ALL the time (Acts 17:24-28). They think God only sees them when they are at church or when they are praying or reading the Bible.

So if they have been doing things they know God has expressly forbidden, naturally they feel uncomfortable in His house. For instance, if a Christian divorces his wife, and abandons his children, he could not help feeling miserable in church (1 Tim. 5:8).

Or suppose a Christian is having an affair with his neighbor's wife; imagine how guilty he feels when the neighbor greets him warmly, or the pastor preaches on adultery.

Then take the fellow who is suing his brother (friend, neighbor, or stranger). The Bible says if a man sue you for your coat, give him your overcoat, too (Matt. 5:40).

If God forbids His children even to defend themselves in court, He certainly does not intend Christians to instigate lawsuits regardless of the provocation.

Not everybody who attends church is a child of God, of course. There are many church members who are not Christians. It's the Christians, however, who suffer guilt feeling when they sin against God.

The best of parents cannot always know when their children do wrong, and eventually the little ones grow beyond parental discipline. But God knows when His children do wrong, and they never grow beyond His discipline.

God can convict sinners anytime at any place, but just as our rebellious children feel uncomfortable in our presence, disobedient Christians are likely to feel most miserable at church.

The guilt we suffer may be real or imagined; the pain is the same. But all it takes to get rid of guilt is to repent.

And all it takes to get rid of bitterness is to forgive.

One may be able to forget his guilt and bitterness at a football game; but no guilty, resentful, bitter Christian can sit through a gospel sermon without being miserable.

Depression is as real as a broken bone — and 10 times as painful, but any two people who will get right with God can get right with each other.

All it takes to be happy — at church or at a football game — is to be in good fellowship with God and our fellowmen.

Jesus said, "Let your light shine..." (Matt. 5:16) Sin and depression smoke the Christian's lamp until no light can shine through. It also makes him miserable.

Not everybody who attends church is a child of God, of course. There are many church members who are not Christians. It's the Christians, however, who suffer guilt feeling when they sin against God.

The best of parents cannot always know when their children do wrong, and eventually the little ones grow beyond parental discipline. But God knows when His children do wrong, and they never grow beyond His discipline.

Come back to the fieldhouse

The Amarillo City Commission may accomplish, by dramatically hiking charges for use of its civic center coliseum, what West Texas State University students and Canyon supporters have been trying to accomplish ever since the university moved its basketball program to Amarillo from the WT fieldhouse.

University President Lloyd J. Watkins, ired by the Amarillo plan to raise coliseum rates for the basketball team, says one alternative for the university, albeit one he terms less desirable, is for the basketball games to be played in the fieldhouse again.

From Canyon's point of view, the alternative is highly desirable.

If basketball is a legitimate activity of the university, it must have some less than ephemeral relationship to the students who attend the university. Playing games in the fieldhouse would at least give some credence to the claim for legitimacy because the bulk of those students who might be reasonably expected to have an interest in basketball live in Canyon and environs.

By refurbishing and using the fieldhouse, the university would avoid future wrangles with the Amarillo commission over the sale of programs, the concession stands and coliseum rates.

The Buffs would have an advantage in practicing where they play.

Canyon merchants, who support the university in a variety of ways every day, would reap benefits from the winter games.

We hope the university will consider a return to the fieldhouse seriously. — C.W.

A disconcerting day for the optimist

Some days are more disconcerting than others for those of us who see some hope for mankind.

There is something basically depressing about a day during which 11 Angolan women summarily execute 17 Cubans in firing-squad manner, and Rotarians from throughout the world are considering an ex-Nazi as their leader. — C.W.

Bicentennial echoes from the past

By MARY ALICE HINES

Early Randall County journalism, while informative, was often colorful and descriptive. In the June 26, 1909, Special Illustrated Edition of the Randall County News, many citizens of the county were featured. In these articles, R.A. Terrill, the editor, gave character references and opinions. I will list some of these personal comments:

Ora A. May — Genial, jovial and a hustler. By trade he is a blacksmith and a good one, too. He always has a good word for everybody, having that sunny disposition which wins and holds friends.

Dr. S.L. Ingham — He is, by profession, a dental surgeon, not one of these "painless" kind because he is a good one. His work having been so satisfactory here that no other dentist has ever had encouragement enough to locate here against him.

R.H. Sanford, Sheriff — Dick Sanford is a fearless officer, unswerving in his enforcement of the laws, alike to friend or foe showing favor to none.

L.C. Lair — Judge Lair is one of the "old timers" here having come when the cattlemen held sway and were trying to force the "nester" to return to his native heath. Judge Lair stuck it out and as a result he is now rated as being among the "best fixed" men of our county.

Robert H. Bates, Evangelist — Among those who have achieved the end for which they have aspired and prepared themselves, is Robert H. Bates, whose home is in the city. Speaking of his work he said, "Wife and I have just returned from a very successful campaign of three and a half months laboring for the Lord in New Mexico. The dear Lord blessed, in a wonderful way, in the saving and sanctifying of the people. I am now at home for a few weeks for a much needed rest, but should the call come from some place where my services are needed I would lay aside all personal comfort and answer the call. I am seeking the lost everywhere. Hallelujah!"

L.T. Lester — He is the same plain, unassuming man as he was when he first landed on the Plains borders in 1886, but having been on the frontier west of the Brazos River thirty-five years with a rifle that shot straight at antelope, buffalo, Indian and bad white men alike. He was unspoiled by prosperity, and the people came to him when he organized the bank.

H.E. Muldrow, the Tonsorial Parlor — If there is any one thing that a man likes more than an easy pair of slippers, it is an easy shave. Mr. Muldrow has had sixteen years experience in this art aesthetic and for twelve years he has been dispensing comfort and beauty to the bearded sex, making them look fully ten years younger than when they enter his door.

The Merry Brothers — They are each six feet and seven inches tall and every inch of them a prince in hospitality and courtesy.

Letters to the editor

Reader wants quality in trustees

Dear Editor:
Voters of the Canyon Independent School District need only review the activities of the School Board over the past several months to see how poorly they have been served.

Board members profess to be motivated by a grave concern for our children and the diminished quality of their education because of overcrowding. They suggest that people who opposed the bonds were against quality education.

BUNK!

The facts are that had they listened to the voters and one of their own members — Mr. Ed Wieck, a bond issue could have passed. People are not opposed to new schools but they do want to be dealt with intelligently. The Board says people were "not informed." How very right they are. The Board failed to inform us about school location, the true rate of next year's tax increase, future tax liabilities from new developments in Amarillo, a pending land deal with an Amarillo builder (the board said they hadn't been approached with petitions), cost of other area schools, future growth trends, etc., etc., to mention but a few oversights.

A communication problem

A thank you from CHS girls

Dear Sirs,

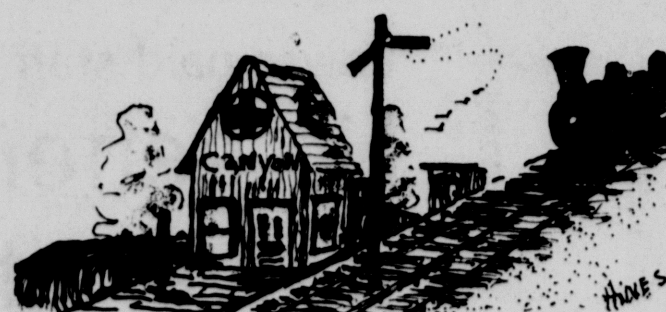

Here is a note of thanks from the Canyon girls basketball team, for the support you have shown & given. We appreciate it deeply. When there is support from the community there is an enthusiasm and pride, that we play just for Canyon.

We did not accomplish our goal, but when we came back from Austin, there was a support just as strong as the previous games we had played. It was a tough loss, but you were still there.

We can not begin to thank the people who stood by us, because there are so many. Those who were able to come to regular season games through the last game, we give a special thanks. We thank everyone who had a part in the support.

Sincerely yours,
The Canyon Girls Basketball Team and Coaching Staff

The plaintiffs also say that the statute is unconstitutional because the PRPC has achieved governmental authority through discriminatory acts and practices. They say that because the PRPC governing board membership is based on the numbers of districts and local governments which are members of the commission, rather than on the population within the districts, the PRPC discriminates.

Attacked in the petition is the PRPC policy of providing minority representation on the governing board, a provision which the petitioners allege "results in unfair and illegal discrimination against a majority of the resident taxpayers in the region."

"The by-laws and organization of such districts are fundamentally unsound and unconstitutional (in that they) denies equal protection to the majority of the population affected to the express overwhelming authority of the minorities affected . . .," the plaintiffs allege.

They allege the use of tax monies from local governments to help run the PRPC is unconstitutional and that similar use of tax monies from state government for the commission ing practices.

"If we were we wouldn't have some (Mexican-Americans) working for us," he said.

Jacobs said to his knowledge the CISD employs one teacher whose name before marriage was a Spanish surname.

A secretary, a teacher aide, a custodian and one or two cafeteria workers also have Spanish surnames, he said.

The school district currently has around 325 employees, including 204 teachers and administrators.

According to the 1970 census, Randall County, which includes the Canyon school district, had a population of 53,000 persons, and 3.2 percent of them were Spanish-American.

Mrs. Rendon, currently a teacher's aide at Rex Reeves Elementary School, complained to The News recently about what she felt was a pay inequity.

She said she is making 10 cents per hour less than other teacher aides with similar experience.

She said she became aware of the difference in pay last fall and asked Jacobs about it. She said he told her to come back in two months.

Mrs. Rendon said she checked back with the superintendent two weeks ago and was told to come back in four weeks so he could check on the situation.

Lair not be required to provide water and sewage systems for the lots.

Under the current subdivision ordinance, Lair would be required to provide curbed and guttered streets of a 31-foot width and would be required to provide water and sewer hookups into the city's system for the lots.

If city commissioners reject the planning board's recommendation, such action would be virtually unprecedented.

Lair argued during the Thursday session that Canyon has hundreds of lots prepared for development now, enough lots to meet the development and growth needs of the city for several decades. He contended that it could be 100 years before growth to the north of Canyon North would be desirable.

If, Lair said, he was forced by the commission to comply strictly with subdivision ordinances, he would not be able to develop the property at all and that such a decision would effectively

"amount to taking of that north section of land without compensation."

"The idea of platting another full section into small lots and blocks and requiring me to put curb and gutter and water and sewer facilities in is a confiscation of property and wrecks a very legitimate planned development that would be an asset to the community," he said.

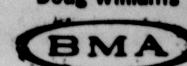

Metcalfe, however, contended that allowing Lair to develop the section outside of city subdivision regulations would eventually become burdensome to the city of Canyon and would keep other developers at some future time from placing subdivisions north of Canyon North.

And, he said, if variances from the regulations are granted Lair for Canyon North, the planning and zoning board will be hard-pressed not to grant similar variances to other developers in similar circumstances.

City Engineer Bill McMorris told the commissioners that "somewhere down the line you'll wish you hadn't" granted variances to Lair.

Solar heating practical now

Solar heating is now practical and can cut fuel costs by 50 to 90 per cent, members of the Noon Lions Club were told Wednesday.

Jim Warner reported on a soon-to-be-marketed solar furnace, described as "affordable, patented, free-standing, plug-in, backyard" apparatus.

The A-frame unit, which measures 12-feet long and 8-feet high, works in conjunction with a conventional heating system, Warner explained. The double-glass-walled solar collection panel, working on a similar principal as a greenhouse, collects heat and stores it in a compartment filled with washed gravel. A fan transfers the heated air into the furnace of the home, where the conventional heating system distributes the sun-warmed air.

"If your thermostat asks for more heat than is in the battery, then your furnace turns on," Warner explained.

Cody Duncan, right, Randall County spelling bee champion, accepts his certificate from Mrs. Chris Thomas, local bee director. Duncan won the right to represent the county in the upcoming regional bee in Amarillo.

Randy Bigelow, center, won the junior spelling bee held in conjunction with the county-wide bee Wednesday here. Bigelow is a fifth grade student. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Neal Bigelow were with him at the bee last week.

Next Range 2 meeting will be hosted by the Valley de Oro Riders on April 13.

Mrs. Charles Harter, chairman, was in charge as the group began plans for a "book sale" to be held April 10 at the Community Center. The fundraising project for the Friends will be directed by Joe Frank and donations of books will be accepted for the sale.

Double ring marriage unites couple in city

Double ring vows were read Friday evening at the First Christian Church of Canyon to unite Miss Mary Lou Richey and Jeffery John Lloyd in marriage.

Rev. Bob Crass, pastor of the University Church of Christ, officiated at the rites. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe W. Richey of Rt. 1, Claude and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Charles Lloyd of 321 W. 6th Street in Emporium, Pennsylvania.

Matching arrangements of yellow gladioli interspersed with daisies in rainbow colors marked the altar. A fifteen bract candelabrum and two spiral candelabrum with 15 tapers formed the background. Pews were marked with votive candles.

Pre-nuptial music was presented at the organ by Mrs. Mike Shadix including Love Story, Romeo & Juliet, Bless The Beasts-The Children, If, Moon River and Jean. Soloist, Miss Ann Starr, presented The Wedding Song and The Twelfth of Never.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal wedding gown of white silk organza over bridal taffeta designed with a fitted empire bodice. The sheer yoke was enhanced by lace and pearls with an organza rushing accent. Her long fitted sleeves were of sheer organza with appliques of chintilly lace. The A-line wedding skirt was held to a band of chantilly lace in a floral pattern and featured a deep flounce ruffle of sheer organza at the hemline which terminated at a brush length. She wore a matching veil of bridal illusion entirely edged with chintilly lace and which formed the chapel length train over the wedding dress. Her wedding veil was attached to a coif accented with lace and she carried a cascade bouquet of yellow and white daisies accented with white baby's breath.

Flower girls were Michelle Rivers of Perryton and Shelly Richey of Littlefield, nieces of the bride, who wore matching yellow floral formal length dresses.

The rainbow theme of the wedding was carried out by the attire of bridal attendants. Their dresses were formal length with sleeveless styling featuring fitted bodices with draped necklines and princess styled skirts. They wore picture hats with lace bands at the crown and carried bouquets of spring tinted daisies with rainbow colored ribbon streamers.

Miss Joyce Richey, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor and was gowned in pale yellow. The bridesmaids were Marilyn Lloyd of Emporium, Penn., sister of the bridegroom, who wore blue; Sally Muire of Midland, who wore green; and Sheryl Gunter of Grand Junction, Colo. who wore pink.

Ray Lyon of Emporium, Penn.

served as best man and the groomsmen were Tommy Tompkins, Bryce Wyre and Keith Oxley. Ushering were Mike Podzemny, David Richey, Eddie Richardson, Jeff Nunn and John Ayers.

A silver candelabra accented with pastel daisies centered the bride's table for the reception following in fellowship hall of the University Church of Christ. The four-tiered wedding cake was trimmed with wedding lace icing with daisy icing accents featuring a rainbow of colors. The layers were marked with multi-colored sugar bells and the top tier featured a miniature wedding couple beneath an arch and lovebirds.

The bridegroom's table featured a double-ring chocolate cake decorated with lovebirds and was served with coffee. The rainbow bouquets of the bridesmaids served as the centerpiece.

Serving at the bride's table were Carol Robinson, Melissa Richardson, Carmen Podzemny, and Beverly Johnson. At the groom's table were Linda Hartsfield and Sandy Railsback with Sheri Walling attending the wedding register.

The bride changed to a lemon-yellow pantsuit with Oriental tunic styling and a floral scarf at the neckline for the wedding trip to Las Vegas, Nevada. Her outfit was accented with a corsage of multicolored daisies and carnations.

EQUAL OPPORTUNITY EMPLOYER

The Kitchen Sink

BY SUSAN WILSON

Being a parent is not an easy job these days with one expert telling you to be more lenient and another saying "tighten the grip."

It's difficult to know just where you should stand and every parent wonders constantly what kind of job he's doing. The experts say that if a child is fairly well adjusted and behaved you're doing okay.

In keeping with this paper's policy of public service, I herein reprint a little quiz formulated by one Dr. Kinderknocker to help you determine how well-behaved your own children are:

1. When you serve your child spinach, does he . . .

a. eat every bite because he loves it?
b. quietly and cleverly scrape it under his biscuit?
c. spoon it onto his little sister's head?

2. You caught your child stealing a candy bar. Does he . . .
a. return it to the store manager with a polite apology?
b. cry and scream and say it just fell into his hands?
c. learn to be much sneakier, vowing never again to get caught?

3. When bed-time arrives does your child . . .
a. dress himself and go quietly to bed without a fuss?
b. dawdle, ask for seven drinks of water, four stuffed animals, three trips to the bathroom, and a kiss from Mommy and Daddy?

c. tell Mommy and Daddy goodnight, wait for them to turn in and then stays up to watch the late late late Great Horribly Awful Monster Movies?

4. The last time you had a conference with your child's teacher it was because . . .
a. She wanted to congratulate you on your smart little child?
b. she wanted to tell you your child had spit a mouthful of mayonnaise, mustard and ketchup out in front of three little girls, making them all sick?
c. she wanted to tell you that after 2 1/2 weeks of being in the same classroom with your child she's decided to go into auto mechanics?

5. The last time you took your child to the dentist . . .
a. he was polite, quiet and didn't have a single cavity?
b. he first refused to open his mouth, then bit the dentist, sprayed mouthwash all over the office and had four cavities?
c. he didn't have any cavities. His teeth had been knocked out when he jumped from the roof of the house onto the neighbor's new sports car.

6. If you take your child to the toy store for a special treat you expect him to . . .
a. happily choose one toy and say "thank you?"
b. say "only one?"
c. terrorize the sales clerks by playing stick-'em up with a BB gun?

7. On long car trips, your child amuses himself by . . .
a. playing the alphabet game, watching for out-of-state license tags, and counting fence posts.
b. playing Get Mommy, arguing about whether barbecue chicken or a hamburger would sink fastest in the Titanic, stopping at restrooms and asking with a consistent drone "Are we there yet?"
c. playing chicken with Daddy by playfully pulling on the steering wheel as you pass a diesel truck on a bridge, throwing rocks at passing cars, and tattooing his arm with a needle and ball point pen.

8. When your youngster desperately wants his way, does he . . .

a. say please?
b. throw a tantrum?
c. threaten you with a knife?
9. If your child tells you he doesn't love you anymore, do you . . .

a. burst into tears?
b. tell him you still love him?
c. shrug and say "No great loss?"

Now, to determine your child's behavior, Dr. Kinderknocker says you should count up your score this way:

*If you answered (a.) to more than two questions, there is something desperately wrong with your child. If you can't get an appointment with a child's psychologist you should get him a job in a soap opera.

*If you answered (b.) to the majority of the questions your child is normal, a happy blend of obnoxious and lovable.

*If you answered (c.) to more than two questions you should make reservations now at the state pen for the kid.

Mrs. Mary Alice Hines, standing, and Mrs. Kathy Glazener look over a schematic of the upcoming Windows to the Past downtown bi-centennial event. The project, which will focus on the city's old-time families, will be in mid-May and is sponsored by the local bi-centennial committee. In the project, local businesses will exhibit displays of memorabilia from well-known families.

Park board members kick off fund drive

Several parks board members gave the newly-created Parks and Recreation Fund a send-off Friday with personal contributions.

Buddy Taylor, George Ritter and Virginia Cotton each contributed to the new funds and Mrs. Cotton was named treasurer to establish contributory funds at both Canyon banks.

In addition, the board will appeal to local clubs for contributions to the Parks and Recreation Fund.

Guidelines established will allow contributors to designate the contributions for specific parks purposes.

Ritter, who is chairman of the parks and recreation board, reported that he had received estimates for materials for two baseball diamonds to be constructed this spring.

Materials for 1490 feet of chain-link fence, fittings, backstop, bleachers, concrete and water lines will cost about $8,288, Ritter said. The city will ask for additional bids on materials.

Dirt to fill the site for the two diamonds is already being hauled into Southeast Park, city manager Glen Metcalf reported. The dirt from roadwork by the State Highway Department is being hauled in two city vehicles now, Metcalf said.

"If we had six trucks, we could haul the entire fill in three days," said Metcalf.

He told the board that the fill from the Highway Department will only be available while the state works in this area. Ritter reported he is attempting to contact county officials to obtain the use of more trucks.

Approximately 6,000 cubic yards of fill will be needed on the two diamonds, Ritter said.

Board members also discussed priorities for additional projects.

G. Plimpton due speech on April 1 at university

George Plimpton, an amateur competitor in the world of the professional, will relate his experiences at 8 p.m. April 1 in the West Texas State University Activities Center Ballroom.

Tickets for the Special Programs Committee presentation will be $2 for adults and $1 for students. Tickets will be available beginning March 25. WTSU students will be admitted free with identification card and tickets will be available March 22.

Plimpton, the eldest of four children of Francis T.P. Plimpton, former ambassador to the United Nations, attended Phillips Exeter Academy and graduated from Harvard University and King's College, Cambridge University.

In 1953 he founded the Paris Review, a literary quarterly of which he is still editor. He has edited four volumes of interviews with literary figures entitled "Writers at Work" that first appeared in the magazine.

He has taught at Barnard, been an associate editor of Horizon Magazine, a special contributor to Sports Illustrated and an associate editor of Harper's Magazine.

During 1970 through 1971, Plimpton wrote and starred in television specials sponsored by Dupont. He tried his hand as a percussionist for the New York Philharmonic, a stand-up comic at Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas, a sports car driver in a race down the Baja Peninsula, a last string quarterback for the Baltimore Colts, a cowboy in a John Wayne movie and an aerialist for the Clyde Beatty Cole Brothers Circus among others. He also boxed for three rounds against Archie Moore.

His books include "Out of My League," the story of a pitching ordeal in Yankee Stadium; "Paper Lion," a record of training and playing quarterback with the Detroit Lions; "The Bogey Man," a report of his stint on the professional golf circuit; "Mad Ducks and Bears," an account of Alex Karras' and John Gordy's lives as professional linemen at Detroit, and his own Baltimore quarterbacking experience; "One For the Record," an account of Hank Aaron's chase for Babe Ruth's homerun record; and a juvenile book entitled "The Rabbit's Umbrella." He is also co-author of an oral history volume entitled "American Journey: The Times of Robert F. Kennedy."

Philosopher to speak for Willson Lectures

Michael Novak, internationally-known writer, educator and political philosopher, will present the Willson Lecture Series at West Texas State University March 30-31.

Novak's opening lecture will be "The Fate of the Gods in the New Land" on March 30 at 7:30 p.m. in the WTSU Activities Center Ballroom.

On March 31, he will present "The Experience of Nothingness" at 10 a.m. and "In Praise of Cynicism" at 7:30 p.m., both in the ballroom.

"Time" magazine, in the Dec. 8, 1975 edition, called Novak the "Prophet of the white-ethnic movement, founder-editor of EM-PAC (Ethnic Millions Political Action Committee), Catholic intellectual and former seminary man who hopes to shape the new white consciousness into a 'creative and progressive force.'"

The magazine went on to say "Novak, author of 'The Rise of the Unmeltable Ethnics' (1972), attributes traditional animosity between Catholic blue-collar white and black to 'elite Protestant politics' that pitted the two groups against each other in a war for economic survival."

Novak has discussed his ideas on busing in articles written for the Wall Street Journal and the New York Times.

"Busing is, in important ways, the Vietnam of the 1970s," Novak wrote in the Wall Street Journal. "It is a quagmire; a lost cause. . . Forced busing will set back the advances of civil rights made during the past generation by 20 years."

Novak has taught at Harvard, Stanford, and Old Westbury, and served as associate director for humanities at the Rockefeller Foundation. Author of ten philosophical works and two novels, he is an associate editor of three major religious journals. Novak now serves as consultant to corporation government and educational institutions.

The lectures are free to the public.

The West Texas State University women's basketball team has been invited to participate in the National Women's Invitational Tournament March 18-20 at the Amarillo Civic Center coliseum. Team members are, l. to r., Cheryl Robbins, Angie Anderson, Kim Ratliff, Bennie Weeks, Cindy Gaston, Joy Williams, Debbie Webb, Alma Ramsey, Wilma Langdon, Alisha Martin, Lynn Davis, and Manager Becki Smith. Not pictured are Martha Keel, Jan Kruse and Cheryl Webster. The women's team had a 26-14 season this year and won the Texas Women's University tournament recently. The team finished sixth in the Texas Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women state meet last week. It was the only team of 16 in the tournament with a non-scholarship program. Other teams scheduled for the NWIT are the Wayland Baptist Flying Queens, Nebraska, Nevada-Las Vegas, Belmont College and North Carolina. Two more teams are to be announced this week from a group including Indiana State, UCLA and Mercer College.
